9 JURISDICTION AND VENUE

10 1. This Court has original jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d)(2) (The 11 Class Action Fairness Act) because the matter in controversy exceeds the sum or 12 value of $5,000,000 exclusive of interest and costs and more than two-thirds of the 15 2. Venue is proper in this Court pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1391 because at 16 least one Plaintiff resides in and suffered injuries as a result of Defendant's acts in 17 this district, many of the acts and transactions giving rise to this action occurred in 18 this district, and Defendant (1) is authorized to conduct business in this district and 19 has intentionally availed itself of the laws and markets of this district through the 20 promotion, marketing, and sale of advertising in this district; (2) resides in this 21 district, and (3) is subject to personal jurisdiction in this district.

22 PARTIES

23 The Non-Sponsor Plaintiffs

24 3. Plaintiff Cats and Dogs Animal Hospital, Inc. ("Cats and Dogs") is a 25 California corporation with its principal place of business in Long Beach, 26 California.
 27

Defendant

13. Defendant Yelp! Inc. (“Yelp”) is a Delaware corporation with its principal place of business in San Francisco, California. Yelp owns and operates Yelp.com, a popular online business directory and user-ratings website.

INTRODUCTION AND BACKGROUND

14. The term “Web 2.0” describes internet websites and applications that revolve around information sharing and user-centered design. Examples of Web 2.0 websites include social networking sites (e.g., Facebook.com), video sharing sites (e.g., YouTube.com), wikis (e.g., Wikipedia.com), blogs, and many other sites that allow users to create, upload, or modify content. Web 2.0 websites thus allow internet users to do much more than simply retrieve information—the users choose what information to interact with, how they interact with it, and how to modify or add to pre-existing content.

15. Online review applications are an increasingly popular form of Web 2.0. Companies such as Amazon.com, Best Buy, and TripAdvisor.com embed Web 2.0 applications within their websites, which allow users to rate products and services and share their experiences.

16. Yelp.com, a website owned and operated by Defendant Yelp, is a website that utilizes Web 2.0 user-website interaction.

17. Yelp.com consists of an online directory of businesses in multiple categories, much like an online Yellow Pages. Each business listed on Yelp.com has a unique Yelp.com listing page, which provides basic business information (such as address, phone number and hours of operation), and user-generated ratings and reviews.

18. To rate and review businesses, internet users simply register on the Yelp.com website. Any internet user (whether registered or not) can browse Yelp.com to find ratings and reviews of businesses.

1 19. Ratings-based websites, including Yelp.com, are highly popular, and 2 have great power to direct the flow of commerce in a given area. Users frequently
 3 read ratings and reviews for all of the businesses in a particular category and locale
 4 then decide where to spend their money based on those ratings and reviews.

5 20. Yelp, however, regularly manipulates the content on Yelp.com listing
 6 pages, despite Yelp's mantra of "Real people. Real reviews." As a result, business
 7 listings on Yelp.com are in fact biased in favor of businesses that buy Yelp
 8 advertising.

9 21. As part of Yelp's regular practices, the company asks business owners 10 to pay for "protection" from bad reviews (in the form of advertising dollars) while 11 Yelp controls whether bad reviews are posted in the first place—the classic scheme 12 of offering "protection" from a problem that the "protector" himself creates.

13 GENERAL FACTUAL ALLEGATIONS

14 The Yelp Business Model

15 22. Individual business listings on the Yelp.com website are created when 16 either (a) Yelp employees or others working on behalf of Yelp or at Yelp's 17 direction, create a new listing for a business (often around the time Yelp enters into 18 a new geographical market), (b) reviewers not associated with Yelp create a listing 19 for a business while, at the same time, becoming the first person to review that 20 business, or (c) a business creates its own listing.

21 23. Businesses may not opt out of being listed on the Yelp.com website.

22 24. Yelp allows businesses listed on the Yelp.com website to register for a 23 free "Business Owner Account," which provides owners with:

- 24 (a) the ability to track how many people view their page;
- 25 (b) the ability to update business information (such as hours
- 26 of operation); and

1 (c) a limited ability to send messages directly to a reviewer
2 (for example, responding to a review), although 3 reviewers can choose to disable this feature.

4 25. Once a business listing is created, individuals registered on Yelp may 5 rate and review the business.

6 26. Individuals register on the Yelp.com website by creating an individual
7 profile, much like a profile on popular social networking sites like Facebook.com.
8 The profile allows individuals to choose a screen name and upload photos, 9 including a profile photo. The individual's reviews are listed within his profile, and 10 the profile has other functions and information such as "Friends" and 11 "Compliments."

12 27. Individuals who create profiles may do so anonymously by using a 13 nickname or "handle," and by not including photos of themselves in their profiles.
14 Anonymous users have the same rights to post ratings and reviews of businesses as 15 named users.

16 28. Any individual internet users, whether registered on the Yelp.com
17 website or not, may search the Yelp.com directory, view ratings, and read reviews.

18 29. Business ratings are made on a one- to five-star scale, with one star 19 being the lowest rating, and five stars the highest.

20 30. In addition to ratings, reviewers must provide a written review of the 21 business.

22 31. Business owners may not publicly (i.e., on their Yelp.com listing 23 page) respond to reviews.

24 32. Registered Yelp users may, but are not required to, vote on written 25 reviews, rating them as either "Useful," "Funny," or "Cool." There is no
26 negatively-spun voting criterion, such as "Not Useful," or "Thumbs Down."
27

1 33. Yelp purports to restrict ratings and reviews which constitute or 2 contain (a) conflicts of interest, (b) second-hand experiences or hearsay, (c)
3 personal attacks, (d) irrelevant material, (d) plagiarism, or (e) which are left blank.

4 34. Yelp also purports to “suppress” “a very small number” of reviews
5 which its “automated software” determines are likely to be “fake.”

6 35. Yelp refers to this “automated software” as its “algorithm.”

7 36. “Suppressed” reviews remain within Yelp’s system and are listed in a
8 registered user’s profile. Those reviews are not, however, displayed on the 9 reviewed business’s Yelp.com listing page, except that when a registered user is 10 logged-in to Yelp and navigates to the Yelp.com listing page of a business that the 11 user reviewed, the review appears for that user only. Thus logged-in users are 12 unable to determine when their reviews have been “suppressed.” While the public 13 sees one version of the business listing (the version with the review suppressed), 14 the reviewer sees a different version (the version where the review appears to 15 remain intact).

16 37. The Yelp.com website draws internet users with the promise that, by 17 conglomerating reviews of individuals with first-hand experiences of local 18 businesses, the site offers an objective ranking of competing businesses through 19 which users can determine the relative quality of a business when deciding where 20 to spend money. Yelp’s mantra embodying this promise is “Real people. Real 21 reviews.”

22 38. A business’s ranking on Yelp.com has immense power to direct 23 customers either to or away from the business. While Yelp’s readership has been 24 climbing, the website currently enjoys as least 29 million hits per month, and 25 includes at least 8 million reviews.

26 39. Yelp’s only stream of revenue is through the sale of advertisements on 27 the Yelp.com website.

- 1 (c) Ads for the Sponsor appear on competitors' listing pages,
- 2 while competitors' ads do not appear on the Sponsor's
- 3 listing page;
- 4 (d) The ability to post a photo slideshow;
- 5 (e) The ability to add a "personal message" about their
- 6 business;
- 7 (f) The ability to update information on special offers and
- 8 events; and
- 9 (g) Access to an account manager who will help "maximize"
- 10 the Sponsor's experience with Yelp.

11 49. Yelp provides Sponsors with additional favors including:

- 12 (a) Removing or relocating negative reviews, thereby
- 13 affecting the perception of the business's quality relative
- 14 to its competitors;
- 15 (b) Creating and posting positive reviews, thereby affecting
- 16 the perception of the business's quality relative to its
- 17 competitors;
- 18 (c) Allowing the business owner to determine the order in
- 19 which reviews will appear;
- 20 (d) Allowing the business owner to choose a "tagline" to be
- 21 displayed on the business's Yelp listing page; and
- 22 (e) Ensuring negative reviews will not appear in Google or
- 23 other search engine results.

24 50. Because these favors are designed at increasing a business's rating,

25 they do not strongly incentivize businesses which already enjoy a four- or five-star

26 rating.

27

51. Thus, Yelp has an incentive to keep most businesses in a three- to four-star rating band—enough for a business to qualify for Sponsorship, but not enough for a business to be satisfied with its rating (and thus not need to purchase a Sponsorship).

Yelp Non-Sponsors

52. Although many businesses do not advertise on Yelp, the term “Non-Sponsor” as used in this Complaint refers only to those businesses to which Yelp offered paid advertising subscriptions, but which declined to purchase any advertising. In other words “Non-Sponsors” could have become Sponsors, but elected not to.

53. Non-Sponsors see positive reviews disappear from their Yelp.com listing pages soon after declining to become a Yelp Sponsor.

54. Non-Sponsors see an increase in the number of negative reviews on their Yelp.com listing pages soon after declining to become a Yelp Sponsor.

55. Sometimes such negative reviews are false, for example, concerning services or goods not offered by the business, or purporting to be from customers or patients who never patronized the business.

56. Such false negative reviews are sometimes generated by Yelp personnel or others who act on behalf of Yelp or at Yelp's direction, or who are compensated in some form by Yelp.

57. Although such false negative reviews violate Yelp's Terms of Service, Yelp regularly fails to remove such reviews for Non-Sponsors.

58. At times even “true” negative reviews violate Yelp’s Terms of Service, for example if they attack business owners personally, or are not based on first-hand experiences. Even in these instances, Yelp regularly fails to remove such reviews for Non-Sponsors.

59. As a result of these consequences for declining to become a Yelp Sponsor, Non-Sponsors frequently see their Yelp.com rating significantly decrease soon after declining to become a Sponsor.

60. The decline of their Yelp.com rating, and the posting of false negative reviews, harms Non-Sponsors, which frequently see a drop in the number of customers patronizing their businesses, and a decrease in income and profits.

Yelp Sponsored Events

61. Yelp “Sponsored Events” are parties, gatherings or other events hosted by businesses listed on the Yelp.com website.

62. Businesses hosting Sponsored Events are expected to provide attendees with goods and services for free.

63. To induce businesses to host free Sponsored Events, Yelp promises positive reviews of the business in exchange for the Sponsored Event.

64. To induce businesses to host free Sponsored Events, Yelp threatens, expressly or implicitly, negative reviews if the business does not agree to host a Sponsored Event.

Yelp Personnel Write and Post Business Ratings and Reviews

65. Individuals employed by Yelp, or otherwise professionally associated with the company (for example, those working as contractors, consultants, in temporary positions, etc.), including Yelp sales people, are empowered to post ratings and reviews of businesses.

66. For example, Yelp's CEO, Jeremy Stoppelman had posted 865 reviews as of March 1, 2010.

67. When entering a new market, Yelp hires “Ambassadors” or “Scouts,” who are individuals paid by Yelp to find and write reviews of businesses in that location.

68. In a variety of contexts, Yelp personnel (for example sales personnel soliciting businesses to become Sponsors) threaten to write and post false negative reviews of businesses.

69. Yelp personnel have in fact written and posted false negative reviews of businesses listed on Yelp.com.

70. In some cases, businesses that received negative reviews from Yelp personnel are subsequently asked to purchase advertising subscriptions.

71. In some cases, businesses that declined to purchase advertising subscriptions receive negative reviews from Yelp personnel.

The Yelp Elite Squad

72. The Yelp Elite Squad is comprised of individuals Yelp touts as “the most passionate Yelpers,” who Yelp says it wants to recognize and reward for being active on the site.

73. Yelp Elite Squad members, or “Elites,” may or may not be associated with Yelp. For example, Yelp CEO Jeremy Stoppelman is a Yelp Elite Squad member, but many Elites are not employed by Yelp.

74. Yelp Elite Squad members are supposed to use their real names in their Yelp profiles, rather than a handle or nickname, and are required to upload a picture to their profiles.

75. A Yelp Elite Squad member is identified on Yelp with an “Elite” badge adjacent to the member’s name and photo in the member’s reviews and on the member’s profile home page.

76. Individuals must apply to become Elite Squad members. Yelp lists the qualifications for Elite status as:

- (a) Having lots of reviews, and reviews that are insightful, engaging and personal (aka useful, funny and cool!);
- (b) Having profiles that really sing!;

- (c) Having a real photo of oneself on one's profile;
- (d) Using one's real name to write reviews;
- (e) Personal pizzazz!, or what Yelp calls "Yelptitude"; and
- (f) Being of legal drinking age.

77. If individuals think they meet these criteria, they must send an email to Yelp explaining why they should be admitted into the Yelp Elite Squad.

78. The primary benefit of becoming a Yelp Elite Squad member is receiving frequent invitations to free Yelp Sponsored Events.

79. Yelp uses the Yelp Elite Squad as an agent of coercion, promising businesses positive reviews from Elite Squad members, or threatening negative reviews from Elite Squad members, depending upon whether a business agrees to host a free Sponsored Event and/or become a Yelp Sponsor.

80. For example, a Yelp Elite Squad member systematically went through businesses located in an arts district in Columbus, Ohio, giving negative reviews to galleries and other businesses in the district, which he visited briefly—but did not patronize—in order to review the businesses. When asked why he was doing this, his response was "you need to contact your customers and have them put up good reviews. My goal is to get you to use Yelp."

81. Yelp compensates Yelp Elite Squad members for their frequent reviews through the provision of free parties, goods, services and other items. Thus, Elite Squad members act as an agent of Yelp. When Elite Squad members review Yelp Sponsors, Yelp is endorsing paid advertisers.

82. Individuals employed by Yelp also review Yelp Sponsors.

83. Yelp does not disclose that, through Yelp employees and the Yelp Elite Squad writing reviews of Yelp Sponsors, Yelp endorses paid advertisers.

Allegations of Misconduct

84. A February 18, 2009 article in the East Bay Express, titled Yelp and the Business of Extortion 2.0,¹ describes Yelp's unlawful business practices. According to the article:

- Yelp sales representatives contact business owners saying, “[Y]ou have a few bad [reviews] at the top. I could do something about those. . . . We can move them. Well, for $299 a month.”
- Almost all the time when Yelp calls business owners, negative reviews are at the top of the business's Yelp.com listing page.
- Mary Seaton, the owner of a furniture store in San Mateo, took Yelp up on an offer to remove her negative reviews if she advertised at a cost of $350 per month for six months. During that time, her negative reviews were removed and old positive ones showed up. After her contract was up, a negative review appeared, which Seaton said contained lies.
- Greg Quinn, the owner of a San Francisco bar and bistro, said a Yelp sales representative moved negative reviews further down his page in an effort to entice him to advertise. The sales rep called Mr. Quinn and said, “Did you notice what I did? Well, we can keep doing that for you.”
- An East Bay business owner said Yelp offered to move one- or two-star reviews of his business if he advertised.

¹ Available at <http://www.eastbayexpress.com/eastbay/yelp-and-the-business-of-extortion-20/Content?oid=1176635>.

1 • Six people told the East Bay Express that Yelp sales representatives
2 promised to move or remove negative reviews if their businesses would 3 advertise.

5 • Six other people told the East Bay Express that positive reviews
6 disappeared, or negative reviews appeared, after owners declined to 7 advertise.

9 • Yelp pays its employees to write reviews of businesses; in one
10 documented instance, a business owner who declined to advertise
11 subsequently received a negative review from a Yelp employee. In other
12 cases, businesses that receive negative reviews from paid Yelp employees 13 are subsequently asked to advertise.

15 • Yelp's Chief Operating Officer, Geoff Donaker, said advertisers and 16 sales representatives do not have the ability to move or remove negative
17 reviews. Donaker's denials are challenged both by local business owners, 18 and by a former Yelp employee, who said that several sales reps told him
19 they promised to move reviews to get businesses to advertise.

20
21 85. As of February 8, 2010, there are 140 comments on the East Bay
22 Express website following the Yelp article, many from business owners describing 23 experiences similar to those discussed in the article.

24 86. A follow-up East Bay Express article provides further evidence of 25 Yelp's unlawful sales practices. The March 18, 2009 article, Yelp Extortion
26 Allegations Stack Up: More business owners come forward with tales of unethical
27

1 *behavior by the popular San Francisco-based web site*² states that since the 2 publication of the first article:

3 [M]any business owners from around the country have come
 4 forward—via emails or comments on the Express' web site—alleging
 5 similar tales of extortionist tactics by Yelp sales reps. . . . Business 6 owners contend that they just want [an] opportunity to respond to 7 negative, false, or damaging information about their businesses.
 8 Instead, the only way for them to salvage their businesses' reputation
 9 is by paying Yelp—regardless of whether the reviews are true or false.
 10 . . . [S]everal [interviewees] said that the reps would offer to move
 11 negative reviews if they advertised; and in some cases positive 12 reviews disappeared when they refused, or negative ones appeared. In 13 one case, a nightclub owner said Yelp offered positive reviews of his 14 business in exchange for free drinks.

15 87. The article tells the stories of six California business owners'
 16 experiences with Yelp:

- 17
- 18 • After Barry³ Hyde, owner of M&M Auto Werkes in Campbell, received a 19 negative rating from a customer's boyfriend, violating Yelp's Terms of 20 Service (prohibiting third parties from posting reviews), he contacted Yelp 21 sales representative Jacqueline Fitzhugh to complain. She told him, "We 22 can't control that, but if you advertise you can control the order that 23 they're in." After declining, Mr. Hyde noticed some of his five-star posts
 24 were disappearing. Yelp told him the website has a spam filter, like

 27 stack-up/Content?oid=1176984](http://www.eastbayexpress.com/eastbay/yelp-extortion-allegations-stack-up/Content?oid=1176984).

³ The Article incorrectly identifies him as "Bob" Hyde.

1 Google. Hyde tracked his reviews, printing them daily to monitor which
2 ones would disappear. Some five-star reviews stayed up for as short as 31
3 days and as long as 131 days. Yelp told Hyde that if he advertised, some 4 of those five-star reviews would come back.

6 • Calvin Gee of Haight Street Dental in San Francisco saw his rating drop 7 from five-stars to 3.5-stars following his declining to buy advertising. Yelp
8 reps told Gee that if he advertised, they would let him choose his 9 favorite review and would move the negative reviews to the bottom of 10 the page. Gee noticed that one of his competitors, CitiDent, had two 11 separate listings on Yelp.com. The business had more positive reviews and a 12 higher star rating on the page that was marked a Yelp sponsor, and more 13 negative reviews and a lower star rating on the harder to find non-sponsored 14 page.

16 • Larry Trujillo owns the Uptown Nightclub in Oakland. Shortly after 17 opening the club, a Yelp sales rep began calling him “almost daily” about 18 advertising. The sales rep would say “I notice you have a lot of positive 19 reviews. We could make sure that those reviews stay positive.” Sarah 20 Lippman, a Sales Manager at Yelp, separately asked Mr. Trujillo for free 21 use of his club with Yelp staff and alcohol expenses paid by the club in 22 exchange for positive reviews on the club’s Yelp.com listing page.

23
24 • Debbie Leonardo, director of membership at the Ruby Hill Golf Club in 25 Pleasanton, received a phone call from a Yelp sales representative who 26 told her that the business could get rid of its worst review if it purchased
27 advertising.

1 • Bob Kurtz, owner of Collectors Real 3 in Oakland, was contacted by a 2 Yelp sales person after receiving a negative review. In an email, Yelp told 3 him that, as a paid advertiser, the negative review could be dealt with.

 5 • Nicholas Paul, an instructor at a Chicago art studio, declined to purchase 6 advertising and shortly thereafter three positive reviews disappeared from 7 and two negative ones were added to the studio's Yelp.com listing page. A 8 Yelp sales rep told Mr. Paul he could control that.

 10 88. An August 13, 2008 article in The Register, a news website, titled 11 *Yelp "pay to play" pitch makes shops scream for help: User generated discontent*⁴ 12 notes that:

13 At least some of Yelp's sales staff hope to make money by offering to 14 hide what you and I have to say. Over the last year, five San Francisco 15 Bay Area business have told The Register that the company has 16 offered to "push bad reviews to the bottom" of their yelp pages if 17 they paid to advertise on the site. One restaurant owner was 18 contacted "five or six" times, and each time, the Yelp sales rep
 19 insisted that if he forked over $6,000 a year for "sponsored link"
 20 status, the site would suppress user posts that put his restaurant in a 21 less-than-positive light. "They told me I had 60 reviews on my [Yelp]
 22 page," said the owner "They told me 'No one is going to read all 23 60. They're only going to read the first few.'"

24 89. A March 9, 2009 Chicago Tribune article, titled Questions arise over 25 Yelp's ads, reviews; Businesses say site rearranges opinions for price; CEO
 26 denies,⁵ reported:

27 _____
⁴ Available at http://www.theregister.co.uk/2008/08/13/yelp_sales_pitch/print.html

1 • Ina Pinkney of Ina’s restaurant in the West Loop said that last
 2 summer a Yelp salesperson offered “to move up my good reviews
 3 if I sponsored one of their events. They called it rearranging my 4 reviews.”

 6 • Jason Luros, an attorney at Hudson & Luros in Napa, California,
 7 stated “one of our reviews mysteriously disappeared, so I contacted
 8 Yelp and was given the usual canned response about how no humans 9 control the reviews. But when I said I would consider advertising if 10 they restored the review, it mysteriously reappeared.”

11
 12 90. An April 3, 2009 article in the Santa Monica Daily Press titled Yelp
 13 Sales Tactics Cause Concern Among Businesses,⁶ reported:

14 After declining to advertise, the [Los Angeles area] business owner checked
 15 the Yelp page again and noticed that at least 10 positive reviews had 16 disappeared while a few negative ones had been posted. . . . They estimate 17 that at least 20 positive reviews had been deleted from the site since the 18 conversation with Yelp about three weeks ago.

19 A Summary of Yelp’s Misconduct

20 91. Yelp sales people represent to businesses that Yelp has the power to 21 manipulate Yelp.com business listing pages, and that Yelp will yield that power in 22 favor of the business if it becomes a Yelp Sponsor, and against the business if it
 23 declines to become a Yelp Sponsor.

27 ⁶ Available at http://www.smdp.com/Articles-c-2009-04-02-52021.113116_Yelp_sales_tactics_cause_for_concern_among_businesses.html

92. The mere representation of the ability to manipulate page content is sufficient to instill in businesses the fear that, through such manipulation, the business will suffer if it elects not to become a Yelp Sponsor. Businesses frequently become Sponsors, not based on a cost-benefit analysis of the advertising, but simply because they fear the consequences of declining a Sponsorship.

93. Yelp in fact manipulates Yelp.com business listing pages in favor of Yelp Sponsors and detrimentally to Yelp Non-Sponsors, including by (a) relocating or removing negative reviews of Sponsors; (b) posting positive reviews of Sponsors and urging others, such as Yelp Elite Squad members, to do the same; (c) allowing Sponsors to choose the order in which reviews appear on their Yelp.com listing pages; (d) removing positive reviews of Non-Sponsors; (e) posting negative reviews of Non-Sponsors and urging others, such as Yelp Elite Squad members, to do the same; and (f) enforcing Yelp's Terms of Service for Sponsors, but refusing to enforce Yelp's Terms of Service for Non-Sponsors.

Plaintiff Cats and Dogs

94. On September 12, 2009, Dr. Perrault, a veterinarian and the owner of Cats and Dogs, became aware of a negative review posted by "Chris R." on the Cats and Dogs Yelp.com listing page.

95. Concerned about the review's defamatory language, possible falsity, and the adverse impact it could have on his business, Dr. Perrault cross-referenced the factual information alleged in the review with his client history.

96. Upon finding that the review of Chris R. referenced a visit that occurred over 18 months prior to its posting (6 months outside of Yelp's 12-month policy), Javier Vargas, the Hospital Manager at Cats and Dogs, called Yelp, on or

1 around September 15, 2009, to request that the review be removed from the 2 Yelp.com website for violating Yelp's review guidelines. The review was 3 subsequently removed from the Cats and Dogs Yelp.com listing page.

4 97. A second defamatory review, from "Kay K.," appeared on the Cats
5 and Dogs Yelp.com listing page within five days of the "Chris R." review's
6 removal. The review read:

7 The only reason I am even giving one star is because it wouldn't 8 allow me to continue without it . . . otherwise, I would have given 9 them no stars. Dr. Perrault is the rudest vet I've ever been to . . .
10 probably one of the rudest people I've had the displeasure of meeting.
11 I agree with the previous reviews about making you feel like an unfit
12 mom. My pup had been sick and I had a theory on what the problem
13 may have been and he wouldn't even entertain the idea, but instead, 14 made me feel bad because my dog got sick. And, my poor dog was 15 terrified of him! He made me feel like I was 2 inches tall and 16 repeatedly looked down his nose at me. Oh, and OVER PRICED!
17 OMG! Who does he think he is??? I did not feel welcomed by him nor 18 his staff. I paid you for a service! No need to treat me so bad!

19 98. Soon after the appearance of these negative reviews, Dr. Perrault and 20 Mr. Vargas began receiving frequent, high-pressure calls from Yelp sales
21 representatives, who promised to manipulate Cats and Dogs' Yelp.com listing page
22 in exchange for Cats and Dogs purchasing an advertising subscription.

23 99. For example, on or about January 5, 2010, Cats and Dogs received a 24 Yelp sales call from "Kevin." Kevin said that Cats and Dogs could advertise with 25 Yelp for a minimum payment of $300 per month, with a minimum 12-month
26 commitment. Kevin stated that if Cats and Dogs purchased a one-year advertising
27 subscription from Yelp:

- 1 a. Yelp would hide negative reviews on the Cats and Dogs Yelp.com
- 2 listing page, or place them lower on the listing page so internet users
- 3 “won’t see” them;
- 4 b. Yelp would ensure negative reviews will not appear in Google and
- 5 other search engine results;
- 6 c. Yelp would allow Cats and Dogs to decide the order that its reviews
- 7 appear in on its Yelp.com listing page; and
- 8 d. Cats and Dogs could choose its “tagline,” i.e., the first few lines of a
- 9 single review shown on every search result page in which Cats and
- 10 Dogs appears (for instance, “Veterinarian in Long Beach”).

11 100. Dr. Perrault declined the offer, saying that he wanted to track referrals
 12 from Yelp for three months without ads, but might thereafter be willing to test
 13 Yelp’s advertising potential.

14 101. Within a week of declining Kevin’s advertising offer, the negative
 15 review from Chris R. reappeared on the Cats and Dogs Yelp.com listing page.

16 102. Soon after, “Kay K.” posted a second negative review. This review
 17 was added on January 6, 2010, one day after Kevin’s sales call:

18 I’ve already left one review about how bad a vet Dr. Perrault is, but I
 19 wanted to add something. I’ve been reading other people’s reviews
 20 and I must have gone to a different Cats and Dogs Animal Hospital
 21 with a vet named Dr. Perrault. Oh wait, no . . . he’s the only one.
 22 Maybe it’s a Dr. Jeckyl / Mr. Hyde thing?! I don’t know. But the guy’s
 23 an @$$$. No other way around it. He’s a jerk, a D-Bag, And so
 24 arrogant. I ran in to him in a neighborhood store right after he saw 25 my poor sick dog at his clinic and he looked right at me, recognized 26 me, rolled his eyes and looked away!!!! Seriously, someone needs to 27 knock this guy down to the size he really is. He needs to drop his

1 Napolean complex and be a professional. After my horrible
2 experience with him, I took my sick dog to Bixby Animal Clinic and I
3 have never had a more pleasant vet experience! Go there instead! My 4 dog loved everyone there! Sorry to rant, but I just wanted to get the 5 word out there. Don't spend the money on this overpriced arrogant
6 vet. It's not worth it!

7 103. On or about January 12, 2010, Mr. Vargas contacted Yelp to protest
8 the reappearance of the "Chris R." review and the highly negative, inflammatory
9 "Kay K." reviews.

10 104. On January 13, 2010, Mr. Vargas received via email the following
11 response from Yelp:

12 We wanted to let you know that we've taken a close look at the 13 reviews by Chris R and Kay K, and after careful evaluation, we have 14 decided to leave both intact. Because we don't have firsthand
15 knowledge of a reviewer's identity or personal experience, we are not 16 in a position to verify your claims that these reviewers are the same 17 person, or that they are connected to the recent vandalism at your 18 hospital. If a review appears to reflect the personal opinion and 19 experiences of the reviewer while adhering to our review guidelines
20 [link], it is our policy to allow the reviewer to stand behind his or her 21 review.

22 105. As of January 18, 2010 Cats and Dogs enjoyed a 4-star rating (out of a 23 possible 5) on its Yelp.com listing page. Sixteen out of 26 reviews (over 60%)
24 gave Cats and Dogs a perfect 5-star rating. Despite this, as of January 18, 2010, a
25 Yelp.com search for "veterinarian in Long Beach" displayed the following tagline
26 for Dogs and Cats:

1 “Dr. Perrault is the most inept/rude veterinarian I have ever met. He
 2 had my rescue dog cowering and barking in the corner of the exam
 3 room within seconds of meeting him. He berated me for 20 . . .”

4 106. Compare Cats and Dogs’ tagline to the tagline (as of January 18, 5 2010) of Bixby Animal Clinic, a Long Beach veterinary business that is a Yelp
 6 Sponsor (and the same company the mysterious Kay K. referred users to in her
 7 second Cats and Dogs review):

8 “This place IS awesome. I brought my little man (Bruin) to Dr. A. as a 9 puppy for the puppy package. They have great hours and were able to 10 acommodate me AFTER work so I never had to take extra time . . . ”

11 107. Cats and Dogs was damaged as a result of Yelp’s actions, including 12 through lost patronage and prospective business.

13 108. Cats and Dogs’ experience with Yelp was not unique, but rather 14 typical of Yelp's advertisement sales tactics.

15 Plaintiff Astro

16 109. Approximately a week after responding to a negative review of Astro
 17 on the Yelp.com website, Bob Gutsell, who owns and operates Astro, received a 18 call from a Yelp sales representative asking Astro to become a Yelp Sponsor.

19 110. The sales person stated that, if Astro became a Sponsor at a cost of 20 $400 per month, Yelp could and would remove negative reviews of the business
 21 from its Yelp.com listing page. Paraphrased, the distinct impression Mr. Gutsell 22 received from the Yelp sales person was “we take care of people who take care of 23 us.”

24 111. Mr. Gutsell thought this was wrong and said so to the Yelp sales 25 representative in declining to purchase an advertising subscription on behalf of 26 Astro.

1 122. Adult Socials' experience with Yelp was not unique, but rather typical
2 of Yelp's advertisement sales tactics.

3 Plaintiff Le Petite Retreat

4 123. Le Petite Retreat began receiving sales calls from Yelp sales
5 representatives in approximately June 2009, usually from Yelp employee named 6 Michelle Mak.

7 124. These sales calls were aggressive. Ms. Mak told Le Petite Retreat that,
8 if the company purchased advertising, she would "help" with Le Petite Retreat's
9 negative reviews and would ensure that positive reviews remained on Let Petite
10 Retreat's Yelp.com listing page.

11 125. Le Petite Retreat declined Yelp's offers to purchase advertising on 12 several occasions. Each time, shortly after declining, Le Petite Retreat saw positive 13 reviews removed from its Yelp.com listing page, while negative reviews remained.
14 Approximately ten positive reviews have been removed from Le Petite Retreat's
15 Yelp.com listing page since the company began receiving sales calls from Yelp.

16 126. In September, 2009, Le Petite Retreat contacted Yelp about a false 17 negative review that had been posted, which violated Yelp's Terms of Service. In 18 fact, an identical review had been posted on Citysearch.com (a review website like 19 Yelp.com) five years earlier, which prompted legal action by Le Petite Retreat.
20 Despite violating Yelp's Terms of Service, Yelp refused to remove the review.

21 127. Le Petite Retreat was damaged as a result of Yelp's actions, including 22 through lost patronage and prospective business.

23 128. Le Petite Retreat's experience with Yelp was not unique, but rather 24 typical of Yelp's advertisement sales tactics.

25 Plaintiff Mermaids Cruise

26 129. In April 2009, three negative reviews of Mermaids Cruise were posted 27 by Yelp Elite Squad members on Mermaids Cruise's Yelp.com listing page.

130. Mermaids Cruise runs cruise events in the San Francisco Bay. The company keeps records of all persons who contact the company, regardless of whether they ultimately book a cruise.

131. At least two of the April 2009 negative reviews by Yelp Elite Squad members were written by individuals who had never contacted or patronized Mermaids Cruise. When John Lewis, the owner of Mermaids Cruise, contacted Yelp to ask that the reviews be removed because they violated Yelp's Terms of Service (in that they were not based on first-hand experiences with the company), Yelp refused to remove the reviews.

132. At the same time, positive reviews of Mermaids Cruise regularly disappeared within 48-72 hours of posting. Even where positive reviews remained, though, the negative Yelp Elite Squad reviews always remained prominent, located at the top of the Mermaids Cruise Yelp.com listing page.

133. After these negative reviews appeared, Mr. Lewis received a call from a Yelp sales representative who told him that, if Mermaids Cruise became a Sponsor, Yelp could adjust the reviews so that the negative Yelp Elite Squad reviews were not so prominent.

134. Mermaids Cruise was damaged as a result of Yelp's actions, including through lost patronage and prospective business.

135. Mermaids Cruise's experience with Yelp was not unique, but rather typical of Yelp's advertisement sales tactics.

Plaintiff Wag My Tail

136. After receiving several negative reviews and seeing positive reviews disappear, a Yelp sales person called Wag My Tail seeking the company's agreement to become a Yelp Sponsor.

137. Wag My Tail has a brick-and-mortar dog salon, and also runs a mobile grooming service. Although it is the same company performing both

1 functions, Yelp has inexplicably divided the business into two separate listings,
2 one for the salon and one for the mobile service.

3 138. The Yelp sales representative who contacted Wag My Tail told the 4 company that if it advertised at a rate of $135 per month for the Wag My Tail
5 salon, and $270 per month for the mobile service, the representative's "assistant"
6 could help to manage the issues Wag My Tail was complaining about, and would 7 help the company better its rating. Wag My Tail has declined to become a Sponsor.

8 139. Potential customers have told Wag My Tail that they have chosen not 9 to patronize the business based on Yelp reviews.

10 140. Wag My Tail was damaged as a result of Yelp's actions, including 11 through lost patronage and prospective business.

12 141. Wag My Tail's experience with Yelp was not unique, but rather 13 typical of Yelp's advertisement sales tactics.

14 Plaintiff Scion

15 142. Scion opened in Washington, D.C., in June 2009. In August, 2009,
16 Julie Liu, Scion's owner and operator, signed up for a free Yelp Business Owner
17 Account. Two weeks later, Ms. Liu began receiving calls from Yelp sales
18 representatives, offering Scion advertising packages. The calls were from different 19 Yelp sales representatives and occurred approximately bi-weekly.

20 143. A Yelp sales representative told Ms. Liu that negative reviews could 21 be removed with the payment of fees. Concerned that if she agreed, negative 22 reviews could be continuously added to Scion's Yelp.com listing page in order to 23 solicit more fees—a process which might be never-ending and completely out of 24 her control—Ms. Liu questioned the sales representative as to how she could be 25 sure that Yelp would not post negative reviews itself in order to request more fees
26 from Scion. The sales representative hung up on Ms. Liu. When Ms. Liu attempted 27 to call the sales representative back, there was no answer.

1 144. After two months of receiving sales calls and discussing the 2 possibility of becoming a Sponsor, Ms. Liu unequivocally declined to do so. The 3 following day, approximately five 5-star reviews disappeared from Scion's
4 Yelp.com listing page, and three negative reviews were posted to the page.

5 145. Two of the new negative reviews were demonstrably false. The 6 reviews commented on a menu that was still posted on Scion's website, but that 7 Scion was no longer actually using at the time the experiences described in the 8 reviews supposedly took place.

9 146. Scion was damaged as a result of Yelp's actions, including through 10 lost patronage and prospective business.

11 147. Scion's experience with Yelp was not unique, but rather typical of 12 Yelp's advertisement sales tactics.

13 THE SPONSOR PLAINTIFFS

14 Plaintiff Bleeding Heart Bakery

15 148. Bleeding Heart Bakery has two locations in Chicago. Each location
16 has a separate Yelp.com listing page.

17 149. Beginning in 2007, Yelp began calling Michelle Garcia, Bleeding 18 Heart Bakery's owner and operator, including on her personal cell phone, trying to 19 get Ms. Garcia to purchase a Yelp advertising subscription on behalf of the 20 Bleeding Heart Bakery.

21 150. On one or more occasions on these phone calls, Ms. Garcia pointed 22 out that some reviews of the Bleeding Heart Bakery were demonstrably "bogus," 23 for example, purporting to describe an experience that occurred on a day that 24 Bleeding Heart Bakery was closed.

25 151. A Yelp sales person calling Ms. Garcia promised that, if she agreed to 26 purchase an advertising subscription, Yelp would push bad reviews to the very end
27 of Bleeding Heart Bakery's Yelp.com listing pages, and that the sales

1 representative would personally remove the “bogus” reviews Ms. Garcia 2 complained of.

3 152. Yelp further promised Ms. Garcia that, as a Yelp Sponsor, she would 4 be allowed to choose her favorite ten reviews, which would always appear at the 5 top of Bleeding Heart Bakery’s Yelp.com listing pages.

6 153. Yelp further promised Ms. Garcia that, as a Yelp Sponsor, she could 7 choose which pictures uploaded by reviewers would appear on Bleeding Heart
8 Bakery’s Yelp.com listing pages, and which would be removed.

9 154. Based on these promises, in November, 2008 Ms. Garcia agreed to 10 purchase an advertising subscription from Yelp. Although Yelp had urged her to 11 purchase a sponsorship for just one of the Bleeding Heart Bakery’s Yelp.com
12 listing pages for $500 per month, Ms. Garcia eventually negotiated a deal that 13 would cover both of the Bleeding Heart Bakery’s Yelp.com listing pages for $600
14 per month. The term of the contract was one year. Ms. Garcia paid the first 15 month’s charge by credit card, and Yelp automatically charged subsequent months 16 to her credit card on a monthly basis.

17 155. At the time Bleeding Heart Bakery became a Yelp Sponsor, the 18 company enjoyed a 4-star Yelp rating.

19 156. During the same month that Bleeding Heart Bakery became a Yelp
20 Sponsor, six negative reviews of the business were posted by Yelp Elite Squad
21 members. Some of the reviews contained personal attacks. During the same time,
22 several 4-star reviews disappeared from Bleeding Heart Bakery’s Yelp.com listing
23 page.

24 157. As a result of the new negative reviews and disappearing positive
25 reviews, Bleeding Heart Bakery’s rating dropped to 3.5-stars.

26 158. As a result of these negative reviews, Bleeding Heart Bakery’s 27 business suffered. For example, during a week following the posting of these

1 negative reviews by Yelp Elite Squad members, Bleeding Heart Bakery went from 2 typical sales of 300 cupcakes per week, to just 24 cupcakes, and was forced to 3 throw out the remainder of its inventory.

4 159. When Ms. Garcia called Yelp to complain about the reviews,
5 including the personal attacks, Yelp told her that if she became a “premier”
6 advertiser—at a higher cost—Yelp would talk to the Yelp Elite Squad and “ask 7 them to give the business another shot.”

8 160. Yelp further told Ms. Garcia said that if Bleeding Heart Bakery
9 increased the amount of its advertising subscription to become a “premier”
10 advertiser, Yelp would bring Bleeding Heart Bakery’s star rating back up.

11 161. Bleeding Heart Bakery’s experience with Yelp was not unique, but 12 rather typical of Yelp’s advertisement sales tactics.

13 Plaintiff Sofa Outlet

14 162. Mary Seaton, Sofa Outlet’s owner, received a call from a Yelp sales
15 representative, who told her that, if Sofa Outlet agreed to purchase an advertising
16 subscription, Sofa Outlet’s positive reviews would be made more prominent while 17 Sofa Outlet’s negative reviews would be made less prominent and, eventually, 18 removed altogether.

19 163. On January 25, 2008, Mary Seaton entered into a $350 per month
20 advertising subscription with Yelp on behalf of Sofa Outlet.

21 164. Sofa Outlet cancelled its advertising subscription on June 17, 2008,
22 which was officially terminated June 20, 2008.

23 165. Within approximately two weeks of Sofa Outlet’s termination date,
24 many positive reviews that Sofa Outlet had received, especially those written 25 during the subscription period, disappeared from the Sofa Outlet Listing Page, 26 while negative reviews that had been previously removed reappeared.

27

1 166. Sofa Outlet's experience with Yelp was not unique, but rather typical
2 of Yelp's advertisement sales tactics.

3 Plaintiff Celibré

4 167. Celibré is currently a Yelp Sponsor, having purchased an advertising
5 subscription in January, 2010 at a cost of $300 per month.

6 168. Celibré became a Yelp Sponsor because a Yelp sales representative
7 promised Kevin DiCerbo, Celibré's owner, that Yelp would allow Celibré to 8 choose the order of reviews on its Yelp.com listing page in exchange for becoming 9 a Sponsor.

10 169. Yelp has in fact moved reviews on Celibré's Yelp.com listing page 11 according to Celibré's wishes.

12 170. Celibré's experience with Yelp was not unique, but rather typical of 13 Yelp's advertisement sales tactics.

14 CLASS REPRESENTATION ALLEGATIONS

15 171. Plaintiffs bring this action on behalf of themselves and the following
16 Classes:

17 The Sponsor Class

18 All persons and entities (excluding officers, directors, and employees 19 of Yelp) in the United States who, from October 1, 2004 to the 20 present, as a result of Yelp offering or threatening to manipulate a 21 Yelp.com listing page in exchange for purchasing or declining to purchase advertising services, purchased advertising services from Yelp.

22 The Non-Sponsor Class

23 All persons and entities (excluding officers, directors, and employees 24 of Yelp) in the United States to whom, from October 1, 2004 to the 25 present, Yelp offered or threatened to manipulate a Yelp.com listing 26 page in exchange for purchasing or declining to purchase advertising, and who declined to purchase advertising.

27 172. Like Plaintiffs, all members of the Non-Sponsor and Sponsor Classes have a Yelp.com listing page.

1 173. Like Plaintiffs, all members of the Non-Sponsor and Sponsor Classes
2 were contacted by Yelp sales representatives and asked to buy advertising
3 subscriptions from Yelp.

4 174. Like Plaintiffs, all members of the Non-Sponsor and Sponsor Classes
5 were promised that, if they purchased advertising from Yelp, negative reviews
6 would be removed or relocated from their Yelp.com listing pages, or those pages
7 would otherwise be favorably manipulated, including through their own input or 8 control.

9 175. Like Plaintiffs, all members of the Non-Sponsor and Sponsor Classes
10 were threatened, implicitly or expressly, that if they did not purchase advertising
11 from Yelp, their Yelp.com listing pages would be detrimentally manipulated,
12 including for example, by removing positive reviews and posting new, negative
13 reviews.

14 176. Like Non-Sponsor Plaintiffs Cats and Dogs, Astro, Adult Socials, Le
15 Petite Retreat, Mermaids Cruise, Wag My Tail, and Scion, all members of the 16 Non-Sponsor Class declined to become a Yelp Sponsor.

17 177. Like Non-Sponsor Plaintiffs Cats and Dogs, Astro, Adult Socials, Le
18 Petite Retreat, Mermaids Cruise, Wag My Tail, and Scion, all members of the 19 Non-Sponsor Class saw their Yelp.com listing pages detrimentally modified after 20 declining to become a Yelp Sponsor.

21 178. Like Non-Sponsor Plaintiffs Cats and Dogs, Astro, Adult Socials, Le
22 Petite Retreat, Mermaids Cruise, Wag My Tail, and Scion, all members of the 23 Non-Sponsor Class were damaged as a result of Yelp's actions.

24 179. Like Sponsor Plaintiffs Bleeding Heart Bakery, Sofa Outlet and 25 CeliBré, all members of the Sponsor Class purchased advertising subscriptions
26 from Yelp based on Yelp's promises and threats, express or implicit.

27

1 180. Like Sponsor Plaintiffs Bleeding Heart Bakery, Sofa Outlet and
2 Celibré, all members of the Sponsor Class would not have purchased advertising
3 subscriptions with Yelp absent Yelp's promises and threats, express or implicit.

4 181. Plaintiffs' claims on behalf of the Class are maintainable under Rules
5 23(b)(2) and 23(b)(3) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure.

6 182. The questions of law and fact common to Plaintiffs and the Classes 7 include:

- 8 a. Whether Yelp extorted the Sponsor Plaintiffs and members of 9 the Sponsor Class;
- 10 b. Whether Yelp attempted to extort Plaintiffs and members of the 11 Classes;
- 12 c. Whether Yelp intentionally interfered with the prospective
13 economic advantage of Plaintiffs and members of the Classes;
- 14 d. Whether Yelp violated the "unlawful" prong of California's 15 Unfair Competition Law, including by:
 - 16 i. Committing Extortion in violation of Cal. Pen. Code
17 §§518-19;
 - 18 ii. Committing Attempted Extortion in violation of Cal. Pen.
19 Code §524;
 - 20 iii. Intentionally interfering with the Non-Sponsor Plaintiffs'
21 and Non-Sponsor Class Members' Prospective Economic 22 Advantages; and
 - 23 iv. Violating 16 C.F.R. Part 255 by failing to disclose that 24 Yelp provides endorsed reviews of paid advertisers;
- 25 e. Whether Yelp violated the "unfair" prong of California's Unfair
26 Competition Law;
- 27 f. Whether Yelp violated the "fraudulent" prong of California's Unfair Competition Law;
- g. Whether Plaintiffs and the Classes were injured by the conduct complained of herein;
- h. Whether the conduct described herein is ongoing;
- i. Whether Plaintiffs and members of the Classes are entitled to damages;

- 1 j. Whether Plaintiffs and members of the Classes are entitled to 2 injunctive relief; and
3 k. Whether Plaintiffs and members of the Classes are entitled to 4 restitution.
